Dear Members,

We have to start by thanking all of you who contacted us following the last issue. The response was simply amazing and very heartening too, as we sometimes wonder if there is anyone out there! We had messages, phone calls and emails from all over the World, and your praise and compliments were appreciated. We heard not only from members, (thank you again), but more judges than usual, and from Russia (a strong gathering of Royal Family fans over there, and amongst them, a journalist who also asked for a copy of our magazine). From America we had a request from one of their commercial specialist breed magazines full of praise and requesting permission to reprint...and so it went on. So, to all our contributors (mud-larks, leading authorities on Royalty, antique specialists, poets, judges, photographers – all of you) and to our loyal advertisers - a sincere thank you. Please keep it up.

Thanks must go to Cath Watson for her help with the technical side of things. Cath refuses to be an official Bat Ears helper, but we certainly couldn't manage without her. Bat Ears takes up days of hard work – late nights and early mornings – for us all, and we are so grateful to her. We could use another helper – I say this every time, but please if there is anyone, literate and computer literate who would like to help, please contact us.

We had a pleasant AGM, and the usual interesting talk followed by a super buffet meal, and we now look forward to the year's three Club shows. Enjoy the company of your dogs.

With best wishes

MISS LETA OGWEN-JONES

The news of the death of Leta Ogwen-Jones on March 11th 2015, so soon after her 103rd birthday, came as a great shock to all her friends. The longest standing member of the M&NCFBC (she joined in 1964) she became our President in 1977 (the first of three successive Welsh Presidents) and later our Patron. She was always cheerful and smiling, and was a kind and very generous President. Leta had a remarkable life outside of our breed. The narrative on the back cover of her book reads as follows:

Leta Jone's life has been an extraordinary one. Born into a Welsh Nonconformist family in the years preceding the Great War, she was educated at Cheltenham Ladies' College in the Twenties, a time of huge social upheaval; she took her entrance exam on the eve of the General Strike. Leta flung herself enthusiastically into the new burgeoning atmosphere of social reform, enrolling as a student at Liverpool University, where she became a committed early proponent of racial equality. Hospital and social work followed in the Thirties, in some of the most terribly deprived slums of Liverpool and the hidden corners of Westminster. But Leta's greatest challenges were to come at the end of the Second World War, when she was sent to Eastern Europe with UNRRA to offer relief to the dispossessed refugees of a shattered continent, many facing repatriation to Stalin's Russia and liquidation. Finally, she had to confront this bloody century's heart of darkness, when she entered the gates of the concentration camp at Dachau.

When she returned to her beloved Wales she continued with her social work until her retirement – assisted and accompanied, from 1960 onwards, by a French Bulldog. Her first, a brindle dog Macsen, came from the famous Millhouse kennel of Miss Gladys Loseby. He was a boy of great character and intelligence; not a show boy said Leta - he had a longish gay tail. Macsen was followed by Cariad – Lubbly Quelle Plaisir, a very lovely fawn bitch. She was mated to Togog Kopi and then to Tommyville Tweed Effect and produced some fabulous fawns who were to play an important part in the Tommyvilles, the foundation dogs of Roger Parker's Innsigns and the Puzzlewaites. With the Welsh prefix Brithmel, they were stars in their day. Leta kept Bronwen as company for Cariad and the two-some accompanied her to each and every M & N happening. Until she was no longer able to travel Leta missed very few of our events. After the death of her two fawn ladies she had several brindle 'rescues'. During her time as President she always helped swell club funds by donating many of her wonderful drawings, paintings, cartoons and sculptures – all of Frenchies of course. They were sought after and treasured by members.

Leta with Ollie and Lucy, taken soon after her 100th birthday celebrations.

Leta had a wonderful 100th birthday party three years ago at her lovely Wrexham home. Over one hundred guests attended, including the Chief of Police, three MPs from the Welsh Parliament, a few vets and many other friends! The champagne flowed all day, and Leta had a wonderful time.

She kept in touch with a few club members, phoning me monthly and without fail, after every club show and when she received each Bat Ears. Her love for and interest in our breed never wavered.

What a wonderful life for this Welsh speaking child, growing up during WW1, learning English and always determined to work helping others. She travelled throughout Europe doing a job she relished, she wrote a book, she was an artist and sculptor, and recently she was honoured by the British & Foreign Bible Society – her ancestor Rev. Hughes being one of the founders. I know how pleased she was in her retirement to hear from or to meet children and grand-children of DPs and refugees she helped during WW2. Her great faith never wavered and she helped so many. Her love for our breed and her friendship will be remembered always by those of us who were lucky enough to have known her. R.I.P. Leta.

Andrew Brace reports on the French Bulldog Club of America Specialty in New York

On the Saturday and Sunday prior to Westminster the French Bulldog Club of America held two Specialty shows at the Pennsylvania Hotel. The first was judged by Dimitry van Raamsdonk, second generation breed expert of de la Parure fame, whilst I had the great honour of judging the Sunday show.

Obviously I did not attend the Saturday show so had no idea what Dimitry had done, and looked forward to sorting out the excellent entry, especially the 30 Champions that were entered in the Best of Breed class.

When I was in Orlando last December American all-rounder and great Frenchie fan Desi Murphy had told me that the American Frenchie people were a little concerned that a European and British judge might not look twice at the "creams" that are so popular in the USA, the very pale fawns, but I assured him that it would not be a problem if the colour was within the confines of the American Breed Standard (which, incidentally has over 28 pounds in weight as a disqualification) and Desi kindly gave me a beautiful tie that featured CREAM French Bulldogs. Obviously I had to wear it when I judged (which caused great amusement in certain quarters) and as it happened it matched my pistachio seersucker jacket very well.

There was quite a variety in type in "the classes" but no shortage of quality. My Winners Dog came from the Bred by Exhibitor Dog class, a very handsome pied, beautifully marked and full of type and quality. It is frowned upon to ask the ages of dogs in the USA and I assumed that he was a fully mature dog whereas he turned out to be just 9 months old so was obviously remarkably forward for his age. I later learnt that it was this pied puppy, Entourage de Couture, who had been Dimitry's BIS winner on the Saturday.

In bitches I had a beautiful brindle, again 9 months but entered in the Puppy Bitch class, for Winners and I found Prairie Gem's Polished To Perfection just that little bit cleaner coming at me than the pied male and so she won Best Of Winners later in the day.

After the regular classes I had just one in Veteran Dog but he was a superb specimen of the breed, in incredible nick for his age and a relentless showman, and even at that point I figured it would have to be something extra special to get past GCh Lebull's New Hope Wooly Bully for BOB.

Although it is always a thrill to judge a Specialty in the States, so often the rings are not large enough to cope with the huge numbers and this show was no exception. It took a lot of organising to be able to get all the dogs in the ring around the perimeter, avoiding having them in rows which I just hate. However, after removing the examination table and chairs, with a little careful manoeuvring we managed it.

Having judged all the Champions, along with the Winners Dog, Winners Bitch and Veteran, I made a few cuts before the final run off. My biggest headache of the day was separating a beautiful brindle bitch who had come from Japan and a cream bitch from the US. They both had their different virtues and shortcomings but in the final analysis I just preferred the overall substance of the cream. So I had lined up the brindle bitch as Best of Winners, the cream bitch, GCh Myshadow's Silk 'n' White Shade, as Best of Opposite, my Select Male, Select Bitch and the requisite Awards of Merit before motioning the Veteran Dog to the top of the line which seemed to bring the house down. Once around the ring, and that's how they stood – with the Veteran Bully topping the lot to tumultuous applause.

That evening Desi Murphy was hosting a cocktail party that was being run by Santa Barbara Kennel Club a taxi ride away and lots of us accepted the invitation. It was a relaxed and fun evening and good to catch up with so many familiar faces, and also to meet some of the people who had been at the Frenchie specialty and who were extremely kind about my judging of what had been a really exciting entry.

Best of Winners and also Best Puppy was the 9 months brindle bitch, Prairie Gem's Polished To Perfection, owned and bred by Andrea Paul and Randy Huelmann.

A Marathon For The French Bulldog Welfare Trust

When Henry Lee (the centre spread Mudlark from your last issue of Bat Ears) ran mud through the full house for the fourth time that day I put on a pair of trainers and earphones and left the house in frustration. To my utter astonishment a love of running was born. A year later when I was planning my first marathon I knew I had to raise money for a cause very close to my heart. Three months of intensive training over the winter months followed and on 22 February 2015 I found myself nervously lined up at the start of the Vodafone Malta Marathon. In my back pocket I had a vial of ashes, the ashes of George, a Welfare Trust frenchie who lived with my friend Shelley Chapman that she had gifted to me. I wanted George's companionship in the miles ahead. The two day break in the sun my husband had been promised didn't materialise; the strong wind and periods of lashing rain were normal Scottish training conditions for me and I fared better than many. I was delighted and incredibly proud when I came in at 3 hours 48 minutes, it's a day I shall never forget.

The wonderful sum of over £1500 was raised for the French Bulldog Welfare Trust, and what was most humbling was not the generosity of family and close friends - that you hope for - but the generosity shown by Frenchie lovers unknown to me. For that access and publicity I have to thank the Welfare volunteers that run their Facebook Auction page, their support was unwavering and greatly appreciated. A dear artist friend Derek Beggs volunteered to sketch your Frenchie if you donated an amount; frenchie pal Ian McQueen donated one of his wonderful Frenchie creations and set up a raffle that sponsors' names were put in - the winner received a beautiful Frenchie finished in gold leaf. Such spontaneous acts of generosity helped the total soar. Thank you to everyone who made the whole adventure possible.

Cath Watson.

Postscript: The bug has bitten - George and I are off to Latvia in May to run the Riga marathon!

THE FRENCH BULLDOGS OF NYMPHENBURG

The French Bulldogs of Nymphenburg are amongst the most sought after and certainly amongst the most expensive of all the porcelain models of the breed; and their pedigree is most interesting!

Production really started in 1753, and, like most of the fine porcelain factories founded in the eighteenth century, it owed much to Royal Patronage. The Crown Heads of Europe, the Electors of the German Provinces and the well-to-do were all eager to pour money into the production of this newly discovered hard-paste porcelain, and the finest craftsmen, designers and artists were employed. Nymphenburg was established by Prince Max III Joseph of Bavaria and Count Sigismund von Haimhausen, and production soon surpassed all other German factories. In 1761 the factory moved from Neudeck to the Palace of Nymphenburg, and there, amidst the beautiful gardens, it exists today.

Perhaps the most famous porcelain figures are those of Johann Joachim Kaendler of Meissen, Johann Peter Melchior and Franz Anton Bustelli of Nymphenburg. In more modern times the most famous animal artist is probably Theodor Karner who died in 1966. He worked for several porcelain factories, including Nymphenburg.

In the 18th century the factory became state property – The Bavarian State Porcelain Factory. In 1862 it was leased to a private company Albert Bauml, and passed on to his son, and from then remained under private direction. Interesting in that the Meissen factory, which, following reunification, reverted to state ownership, despite wealthy Japanese and American companies trying to buy it.

Nymphenburg porcelain has always been made to the highest possible standards – almost reaching perfection. The finest and purest raw materials are used, the pieces are moulded and decorated by hand, all impurities are removed and the piece fired twice, to give it that glorious translucency, that milky white colour with a hint of greenish grey. They are wonderful to see and delightful to touch – just run your fingers lightly over those Frenchie feet and feel their nails!

The Nymphenburg mark has always incorporated the Bavarian coat of arms, a shield shape, today with 'Nymphenburg' printed underneath. On finer pieces, such as the wonderful Italian Greyhound I have seen this shield often incorporated into the design of the model – in this case the cipher on the corner of his coat. Modern Frenchie pieces which I have bought in America are marked 'Western Germany' as well, whereas those I have bought directly from Germany do not carry this. Various impressed marks denote the model number and, sometimes, the artist.

Like Meissen, Nymphenburg still occasionally issues pieces made from old 18th and 19th century moulds, and again like Meissen, I suspect that pieces are issued in the white with their marks cancelled by an engraved stroke to denote slight defects. I have never found that these were in any way cheaper than the virtually flawless pieces, nor have I ever been able to detect a fault!

The standing pied Frenchie in the pictures show the more recent model and the finer boned, and to me, the much more interesting model which was made much earlier. Remember all the models are hand painted and so no two are ever the same. The standing model is about 6" high and 7" long.

The sitting puppy with its fly-away ears and pot belly is made in 2 sizes, the smallest just over 3" and the larger one is 7" high. This puppy is so appealing, simply for its "aaah" factor, and the standing one has a lovely Frenchie expression, and wonderful balance. Both have of course the exquisite feel of Nymphenburg porcelain. At present the small puppy is the only one in production. However, please be aware, that 'in production' should not be confused with 'readily available! I waited 6 years for my last piece; meantime, prices do not stand still!

The early standing model and the appealing puppies.

There is one more Frenchie model, the much sought after, almost life-size lying model. This is a dream of a piece and I have found everyone who sees it, loves it; maybe it is its sublime expression which captures hearts.

Finally, and perhaps a clue as to why Nymphenburg features Frenchies amongst the outstanding dog models which it produces; a press cutting from the 1970s which shows Princess Pilar von Bayern with her French Bulldog outside their home, the Palace of Nymphenburg.

FBWT Annual report for 2014

Once again we come to the end of another years work for the Trust, it has been one of our busiest years with a total of 112 dogs and their owners helped by the Trust, of those 4 had to be euthanised because of unprovoked aggression to people and of those 2 were found to be suffering from brain damage.

Thanks must certainly go to all those volunteers who have helped us to cope with the collection, transport, and fostering of these dogs, and to those who gave these dogs a forever home whatever their problems.

I would also like to thank our Fund raising team and all those supporters on Face book etc. whose organisation and donations have been fantastic, with online auctions doing very well. I feel I must mention Cath Watson who recently ran a marathon (her first), in Malta, on behalf of the trust and raised £1600 for us, a fantastic result.

We have again had dogs coming in with various medical or social problems again a large percentage with imported connections, but have been lucky to find good homes for them.

SALLY

One dog that came to the trust with a small problem that quickly turned into a life or death situation taught us why we all work so hard for these dogs. Sally was an incontinent 11 months old, but, aside from her medical problem she was a normal young Frenchie, very active, playful with a loving and loyal disposition. It was revealed by the owners, that, prior to their ownership Sally had been mated at 7 months and later lost all her puppies at birth. The present owners bought Sally off the internet, although they were aware of the disastrous mating etc. they had not known about the incontinence problem. Their own vet was unable to deal with it and they could not afford a specialist. Sally came to the trust and went to live with one of our foster carers, Sue Worrell. She was taken to the vets for a check-up and to try and solve the problem. He quickly found that Sally's problem was quite unusual and serious, caused by the fact that the tubes from her kidneys by-passed the bladder and were connected directly to the urethra so she had no urinary control. This meant referral to a specialist for a rare and costly operation to reconnect her kidney tubes to the bladder. The Trustees agreed unanimously to fund the operation and any ongoing treatment. The operation was a success and she is now learning to work her bladder muscles. During her convalescence a permanent home was found for her. She has recently represented the trust with her new family at our rescue stand at Crufts.

PEGGY-SUE

This is Peggy-Sue. She was found wandering on a sea front in Wales and in very poor condition. She was taken to the local council kennels, where it was obvious by her Caesarean scars that she had been well used as a breeding bitch. The dog warden had a soft spot for Peggy Sue and kept her longer than the rules allowed. However, when the time to put her to sleep grew too close she contacted the Trust, and we picked her up the night before she was to be put to sleep. She was clean and vet checked by our foster carer and found to be about 2-3 years old in good general health, although one ear was down and her dentition was poor we think from biting her cage. She was quickly transported across country via Penkridge to the Northeast, to her new family home who had recently lost their Frenchie.

Finally the trustees hope to fill the vacancy for a new trustee at the AGM, also appoint some area coordinators to help the Trust carry on its work in helping Frenchies in need, and to give the general public even more available contacts who can give them the help and information they need to help them make the right choices for them and their dogs.

ANOTHER CARING FRENCHIE

Kathleen & Hebe

Many years ago I would visit my friend Angela and her parents, Jack and Kathleen, and Gizy, my little Frenchie always came along. He would always make himself at home and jump onto the chair.

Sadly, Jack had a stroke and was very ill for several months. When he came out of hospital he wasn't able to do very much so he would sit and watch TV most of the time.

I wasn't sure how Gizy would respond to Jack, so on our next visit I was a little apprehensive. As we walked into the room Gizy looked directly at Jack, and made no attempt to jump onto any of the chairs. He just looked at Jack, and sat beside his feet, leaning against his leg, and that is where he stayed until we left. This same behaviour was repeated on several occasions, it was as if Gizy knew Jack was ill, and was protecting him.

Many months had passed after Jack had passed away, and I went to see Kathleen and Angela. As we walked into the front room, Gizy looked at Jack's empty chair, and then decided to look for him. He went into the dining room, then into the kitchen as we all stood there just watching him. He then decided to go upstairs, and we could hear his little grumbling noises as he walked around. Minutes later he came back downstairs, obviously satisfied that Jack wasn't there to look after anymore, and jumped onto the chair and settled down.

Recently Kath had to go into care, after breaking her hip following a fall, and was now suffering with dementia. Angela and I took Hebe to the care home to see her as Kathleen. She had met Hebe as a puppy and loved her, mainly because she is Gizy's great, great granddaughter. Kathleen was overjoyed to see her little friend Hebe, and the other residents made such a fuss of her too. One lady asked if I could bring her every day, another told me about her dogs and how she missed them. So, yes, we will be going back.

Hebe and Mum (Joan Howarth)
